19 Re: Dkt. No. 77
21

22 The Court has reviewed Defendant's Motion for Early Termination of Supervised Release
23 and supporting documents (Dkt. No. 77), and the oppositions filed by the Probation Office (Dkt.
24 No. 80) and the United States (Dkt. No. 79). On December 16, 2020, Defendant was sentenced to 25 a five-year term of probation, with a special condition requiring him to complete 18 months in the 26 Location Monitoring Program on a curfew. Dkt. No. 55 at 2, 4. This noncustodial sentence was a 27 substantial variance below the advisory Guidelines range of 27 to 33 months of imprisonment, 28 which was based on the loss amount of Defendant's fraud offense (nearly $300,000) and an enhancement for ten or more victims. Dkt. No. 45 (Presentence Report) at 7, 17.

Having served less than half of his term of probation, and only a few months after completing the electronic monitoring condition, Defendant now seeks outright termination of his supervision obligation. Defendant essentially contends that he has made extraordinary rehabilitative efforts while on supervision, cites his intention to move to Texas someday, and notes that he has fully paid his restitution obligation. Dkt. No. 77.

After considering the sentencing factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), the Court may "terminate a term of supervised release and discharge the defendant released at any time after the expiration of one year of supervised release . . . if it is satisfied that such action is warranted by the

1 conduct of the defendant released and the interest of justice.” 18 U.S.C. § 3583; see also United 2 States v. Emmett, 749 F.3d 817, 819 (9th Cir. 2014).

3 The Court exercises its discretion to deny the request for early termination. See United 4 States v. Nixon, 839 F.3d 885, 887 (9th Cir. 2016). Compliance with the terms of supervised
5 release is expected (and required), and does not by itself constitute a basis for terminating 6 supervision less than halfway through. The Court is also of the view that the deceptive nature of 7 the long-term, large-scale fraud in which Defendant engaged counsels against simply taking his 8 word for it when it comes to the characterization of his current situation and plans. The Court 9 finds it especially concerning that Defendant’s supervising probation officer in Hawaii says that 10 “[d]espite [his] lenient sentence, Mr. Sparrow’s attitude throughout supervision has consistently 11 failed to appreciate these circumstances,” and that “[i]nstead, he has displayed a contentious 12 attitude toward supervision, which contradicts Mr. Sparrow’ representation that this sentence has 13 deterred him in any way and/or that he takes responsibility for his actions.” Dkt. No. 80 at 2. This 14 candid firsthand assessment establishes that the continued oversight of the Probation Department
15 is warranted, especially given Defendant’s ongoing work supporting financial real estate 16 transactions and his plan to begin buying and selling properties himself. The need for specific and 17 general deterrence also supports the continuation of Defendant’s supervision term. And while the 18 Court commends Defendant for satisfying his entire restitution obligation early, that prospect was 19 a substantial part of the reason that his victims supported a noncustodial sentence in the first place, 20 along with Defendant’s parental responsibilities.

21 Ultimately, Defendant has not shown that the interests of justice warrant termination of 22 supervised release at this early stage, and the motion for early termination is accordingly

23 DENIED.

24 IT IS SO ORDERED.
